

Command Financial Relocates Headquarters and Operations

January 2014: Command Financial has announced the move of its headquarters and operations to 345 Hudson Street New York, New York 10014. As of January 6, Command has operated from its new location on Hudson Street. Command CEO and President Stephen Penders commented: "Our new location was engineered and fully built-out to our specifications. Our new floor plan was specially designed to optimize workflow efficiencies, leverage technologies, and provide a fully ergonomic environment to reflect the changing requirements of our clients."

Command Financial, a leading financial printer, had operated from Varick Street since its inception in 1990. According to Penders, "our former space on Varick Street served us very well for more than twenty years. We were able to locate customer service, composition/typesetting, in-house proofreading, and EDGAR and XBRL services in one area. Our new space on Hudson Street maintains this, but also affords us the opportunity to have print production and planning as well as all department management in one large common area which enhances communication. Our new client suite has even larger conference facilities as well as their own dedicated area. Our new location allows Command to continue to redefine financial printing by providing superior service and cost effective solutions for our clients."
